limited by their morbidity and mortality. Balloon tamponade followed by surgery is used for patients who fail to stop bleeding from oesophageal varices and for acute haemorrhage from gastroduodenal ulcers. Currently, endoscopic therapy is used to stop bleeding from gastroduodenal ulcers. Nd:YAG lasers can be used to vapourise bleeding lesions. The Nd:YAG laser is capable of ablating gastric and duodenal ulcers. The device has a wavelength of 1064 nm; it can be split into two or three separate beams; and the shaft is flexible. In a randomised trial of 100 patients, the Nd:YAG laser was more effective than standard endoscopic therapy (sucralfate or adrenalin injection) for acute bleeding

(p [Surgical treatment of complicated sinusitis]. The aim of the study was to analyze the results of the treatment of complicated sinusitis (CS) depending on the pattern of the inflammatory process and location. One hundred and sixty-five patients with CS were divided into three groups according to the pattern of the inflammation. CS was diagnosed at the point of inflamed mucosa of the maxillary, ethmoidal or sphenoidal sinus together with two other sinuses. The patients were divided into three groups: group 1: concomitant chronic rhinosinusitis (CRS), n = 30; group 2: localized rhinosinusitis (LR), n = 50; group 3: subacute/chronic maxillary sinusitis (SCM), n = 678ea9f9e
